Curtis' famous military band led the Negro section, followed by the Spanish War and War Veterans the boys in khaki, the overseas boys with their helmets, etc., formed a conspicuous float; then the Red Cross workers with their tasty uniform, the High School girls who did war work, the War mothers, special cars of ladies representing the Defense League; a massive float jammed and crowded with children under the direction of Unity Baptist church, next a body of men representing the Negro patriotic Defense League followed by decorated cars of civilians.
